Traffic Circles were deemed 'inappropriate'... by Jason Kap
Jason Kap
Yesterday 7:09 PM

Traffic Circles were deemed 'inappropriate' by the Preteet study the city did for this project earlier this year. They must be roundabouts to meet that design. Per the previous July 19th meeting Redmond City already admitted that they do not have room for a King County or WASDOT compliant roundabout

It was said that streets wider than 10 feet allow cars to drive much faster, and free ways lanes are 12 feet. The area on north side of the gate is very wide, probably even more than 12 feet and 124/126/th is 45 mph. I expect that opening the gate will cause cars to speed up drastically. And cars going 45 mpg may be driving that quickly headed south. This will be very unsafe.

Your comment that the Fire Depart. is ok with this plan but do you mean they are ok with the plan as far as their access or do you mean they feel this plan is a good and safe plan?
